First Mock Trial was a Success

Destructive Driver or Gears Gone Wrong?

Is the defendant a killer or the victim of defective brakes? Criminal Justice students learned about criminal court trials and procedures by preparing for and staging a complete mock trial based on a real court case. The case involved a defendant charged with four counts of felony vehicular manslaughter and six counts of reckless driving.

Prior to the trial, students learned about the role of each court employee and the trial process. They also wrote opening and closing arguments, prepared witnesses for testimony and anticipated their opponent’s arguments. Student jurors carefully considered all the evidence and testimony entered before rendering a verdict. Jury foreman Jackson Lauteria said, “I liked how both the defense and prosecution put a lot of thought into their questions. It helped the jury understand the impact of the incident on everyone’s life.”
