Message From The Principal

Greetings Chief Families!

It has been a fantastic start to the 2nd 9 weeks of the school year. The school year is progressing really fast and I am so proud of our students and how they have transitioned back on campus. Please note, 2nd quarter of the year is the shortest quarter; however, it is a very important one. All students must come to school each day and complete all of their assignments and assessments. If you need assistance, contact your teacher or guidance counselor. In addition to students passing their classes, they must show mastery on their semester exams.

Attendance is crucial. If a student is absent from school, learning cannot take place. If a student is absent from class more than 10% of a semester, he/she must pass at least on nine-week marking period and the semester exam in order to demonstrate mastery an earn credit for the course. If you have any specific questions, contact our school counseling office. Grades are uploaded into SIS every two weeks. Please check the progress of your students' grades on a regular basis.

Fall sports are wrapping up and winter sports are underway. Please come out and support our athletes at upcoming sporting events.

Please read through our newsletter thoroughly as a lot of important information is shared. In addition, I send a weekly email to all parents, students and staff member every week (Sunday) to provide information for the upcoming week.

Finally, in a few weeks, we will launch into a much-needed Thanksgiving break. I am so grateful and thankful to work with all of our students, teachers, staff and parents each day. Santaluces is a special place and it is because of the outstanding students, staff and community members.

Please allow me be the first to wish you a Happy and Healthy Thanksgiving! I hope you enjoy all of the traditions you hold near and dear to your heart. Our Thanksgiving break is from November 19 – November 24. Students return back to school on Monday, November 27, 2023.

Enjoy the holiday season!

Palm Beach County Choice Programs

School District of Palm Beach County (SDPBC) Choice Programs reflect the diversity of the District and are designed to attract all Palm Beach County students. Families with students entering pre-kindergarten through grade 12 have the opportunity to choose from an array of Choice and Career and Technical Education (CTE) theme-based curricula offerings at the elementary, middle, and high school levels that provide innovative and rigorous academic instruction by specially trained teachers.

Choice and In-House Programs have been established in elementary, middle, and high schools to provide an opportunity for students to engage in intensive study in specific areas. Choice and In-House programs offer the opportunity for students to discover their talents and explore their interests while focusing on academic rigor. These programs provide students with a pathway to post-secondary education and careers. Programs include the K-12 Arts continuum, K-12 International Baccalaureate continuum, K-12 Dual Language continuum, elementary and secondary Cambridge Academy programs, STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics) programs at all levels, and elementary Montessori, STEAM (STEM + Arts), Environmental and Animal Science, and Health and Wellness programs. Students may participate in an "in-house" program if the program is only being offered to students whose attendance boundary is zoned for the school ("In-House program"), or they may choose to attend a program that is only offered at a school outside of their regular attendance boundary (Choice program).

All Choice and Career Academy programs require a Choice application and selection through a Choice lottery process. These programs are available to all students, regardless of zoning. If the student is applying for a Choice program that is offered at his/her zoned school, the zoned school program may be listed as the first choice.

Applications will be available on November 1, 2023 for the 2024-2025 school year.

December 8, 2023

- Deadline to submit an application for arts programs requiring an audition.

Expedition 72: Coastal Ocean Explorers: Sharks - Santaluces Community High School

ANGARI crew and scientists from Florida International University's (FIU) College of Arts, Sciences & Education welcomed aboard 13 Advanced International Certificate of Education (AICE) Marine Science students and three teachers from Santaluces Community High School for a Coastal Ocean Explorers: Sharks expedition onboard R/V ANGARI. After a safety briefing, introductions to the ANGARI crew and FIU scientists, and initial instruction, the students got to work assisting with the assembly of a baited remote underwater video system (BRUVS) which they deployed into the Lake Worth Lagoon. The BRUVS consists of a large metal frame with an attached bait box and GoPro camera. This piece of field equipment gives scientists a visual record of what species are present within the area study area. After an hour soak, the participants and scientists worked together to bring the BRUVS back onboard and reviewed the video footage. Everyone was excited to find that the BRUVS camera had recorded a passing lemon shark, a first for the program's deployments in the lagoon!

Students worked in teams throughout the day, taking turns on deck with the FIU scientists where they fished for sharks with drumlines, a research-specific type of fishing gear designed to minimize stress on caught sharks. The students and teachers participated in all the steps of the process, from baiting circle hooks to assembling, deploying and recovering the drumlines, and recording relevant data. In addition to the BRUVS and drumline deployments, the Santaluces participants also had the opportunity to discuss marine career pathways with the scientists and crew, and participated in a variety of activities that allowed them to practice and hone their scientific observation and species identification skills.

This expedition was made possible with funding from the Great Charity Challenge.

7 Tips for Academic Success in High School

Adapted from: <https://www.nshss.org/blog/7-tips-for-academic-success-in-high-school/>

High school is a magical time when students have the opportunity to learn, grow, and make mistakes to work on creating the academic habits they will carry with them to college and a career.

However, for high-achieving students, high school can also feel overwhelming. Academic success seems mandatory to get accepted into the right colleges and universities and pave the way toward a bright future.

Fortunately, the way to enjoy academic success in high school does not have to be a mystery. Here are seven tips for high school students to keep in mind as they strive for academic excellence during these formative years:

1. Explore and Find Your Passions

As a high school student, one of the most important ways to prepare yourself for a successful future is to do a lot of exploring so you can discover the areas of study and extracurricular activities that you're passionate about.

A common misconception might lead students to believe that colleges and universities, even future employers, find a wide array of activities most impressive. In fact, leaders are actually often impressed by individuals who find their few passions and pursue them whole-heartedly. Pursuing too many different activities at once in high school could lead to an overwhelming experience. Sometimes, selecting a few activities you care most about will lead to more success in those areas than if you attempt to get involved in every possible way throughout high school.

Take time to explore the world and all possibilities of study while in high school—and then really delve into the subjects and activities you love the most.

2. Learn for Growth, Not Just Your GPA

Speaking of passions, learn to be passionate about the act of learning itself.

Though the prospect of getting into the right college or university to eventually land the dream job might tempt you to focus on achieving the highest GPA possible, high school should also be a time when you fall in love with the process of learning.

The more fun you have while learning in high school, the more fun you will learn to have throughout your life, since life is a constant journey filled with new discoveries and lessons. If you can master the art of enjoying school now, imagine how much more fulfilling your entire high school and college experience will be later.

Focusing solely on grades and on-paper achievements will lead to a pressure-filled high school experience. Remember to take stock of where you are, who you are with, and what you are learning as you soak in your high school years.

3. Work On Time Management Skills

While time management does not sound like the fun you might want to have while learning, discovering how to use your time wisely will certainly help you enjoy high school more. You can accomplish time management in whatever ways work best for you, but some tried and true methods include the following:

- Keep a calendar, whether digital or on paper. Calendars have a way of reminding you of the tasks you once thought were important, and you can even color-code them to reveal where you are spending most of your time--whether on studying, social time, extracurriculars, etc.
- Schedule study sessions for classes before the week of the test. Studying over time is a much better plan for success on tests than cramming the week or night before. Give your brain time to digest information, and you'll be surprised how much better you know the material—not just for the test, but for a lifetime of knowledge.

- Prioritize the most important tasks. Determine which tasks every day are most important to you, and add them first on your list. For example, if you know you have a major project due in a week, you might want to prioritize brainstorming for that project and save the easier homework for later.
- Create good habits, like reviewing notes each night before bed. Looking over information before bed can help the content solidify in your mind, so make it a habit to review notes for your hardest classes before you go to sleep. Any small, doable habit like this is a good idea--especially when you can form that habit at such a young age.
- Strive to be on time. In every stage of your life, you'll find that people respect those who are prompt. And when you are on time, you show others you respect their time as well as your own. The earlier you can learn to be on time, the better, since this skill will always serve you well.

Learning how to manage your time in high school will inevitably make the transition to college and your professional life much easier. Best of all, the more adept you become at time management, the more time you will hopefully create in your schedule to have some fun with friends, as well as studying and enjoying extracurriculars.

4. Get Involved in Your Community

The life of a high school student can sometimes feel like living in a bubble. However, you will become more engaged in your own life the more you engage with your surrounding community.

Not only does volunteerism add to a resume, but it also has a way of creating much happier students.

Moreover, by getting involved in your community, you will have more opportunities to explore your interests, thus providing you with a better idea of which area(s) of study you might want to pursue in college and in a future career.

You might even find that you start to get more interested in your classes, since you see the evidence of those lessons in your community and can apply academics to the world around you.

5. Utilize Your Resources

As with most accomplishments in life, succeeding in high school cannot be done without help. In high school, you have access to a wealth of resources, and you can usually find sources of help you hadn't even thought about. Of course, your parents, teachers, family members, and friends should all be there to help you; but you have other resources at your fingertips as well.

Guidance Counselors

Get to know your high school counselors, as these individuals will not only be able to help you manage coursework and life throughout your early high school years but will also become invaluable resources as you plan for life after high school--in college and beyond.

High School Honor Societies

As a high school student, you also have access to high school honor societies like the National Society of High School Scholars (NSHSS), where you can apply for scholarships, gain leadership experience, and learn tips and tricks from other scholars and educators--as well as plug into a network.

Becoming a member of a high school honor society will also give you the resources you need to create both short- and long-term academic goals.

6. Prioritize Your Health

You cannot have academic success in high school if you are not healthy enough to experience it fully, so make sure you always prioritize your health.

Tip #3 will help with this, but make time to exercise, eat balanced, nutritious meals, drink plenty of water, and sleep. Take a rest when you really need it, carve out time for mindfulness in your day, and spend time with friends and family.

Your body and mind work best when you take good care of them, so do not sacrifice your health for the sake of a good grade. You know when you can work harder and when you should take a break, so listen to yourself and learn your own signals.

7. Create Your Own List of Success Tips

Finally, realize that you are a unique individual and will be able to create your own list of success tips as you go through high school.

Every student and adult could tell you personal lessons they've learned, but only you can get to know yourself well enough to craft your own list.

By recognizing your individual power, you will also begin to learn that only you can be the best version of yourself. Know your value by prioritizing your academic success in high school, learn which classes and activities you are most passionate about, and enjoy learning while you have a safe and supportive place to do so--you will thank yourself in the future!
